As the new academic year begins, First Lady Crissy Haslam is enlisting parents as partners in the education of their children in two ways:

- by paying attention to their children's homework assignments and
- by reading with their children 20 minutes every day.

Both activities draw the family closer and demonstrate that Mom or Dad values what is going on under the teacher's direction.

As further scholastic support, the Friends recommend a reference library for every home. By providing such materials and by using those materials themselves, parents model the use of resources and support the child's efforts to extend his or her learning beyond the classroom walls.

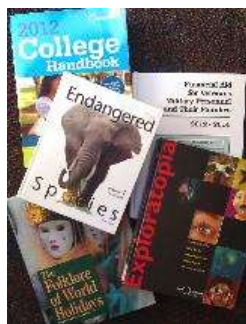

Friends@Rothrock Used Book Shop, the daily bookstore at Lawson McGhee Library, has September specials that will help—reference books at bargain-basement prices. Age-appropriate general reference aids include dictionaries, books about grammar and writing, and thesauruses, all priced at $2 or less.

Materials about the sciences—from nature for the young ones to chemistry and physics for older students—are available. Many volumes related to historical figures and/or events have been selected for the sale. Early shoppers may find sets of Childcraft or World Book Encyclopedia.

Books chosen especially for the younger reader will not only help those youngsters complete homework assignments but will also strengthen their independent reading skills. Friends@Rothrock maintains an appealing collection of

Have you seen these signs in the yards of schools, teachers, and other avid supporters all across our county?

As you know, reading aloud to children is a delight... and the Friends have opportunities for you to experience that in various settings around town. Currently we have openings in Head Start classrooms; volunteers read for 30 minutes on five Thursdays in October and November. If this is a place you could help out, please contact Abby Wintker, 215-8775 or info@knoxfriends.org. For more information, click here.
